THE MOUNTAIN SONG.

I am the herdsman here on high;
Beneath me lies the castle lie;
Upon me sits the sun's bright beams;
His light glow reddening o'er my gleams;
I am the mountain herdsman.

Here streams are cradled at their birth;
I drink them fresh from Mother Earth;
O'er rocks they rush in wildest leap;
I catch them ere they touch the steep,
I am the mountain herdsman.

The snow peaks are my loved domain;
Here gather mist and cloud and rain;
Here winds from North and South howl strong
Yet high above resounds my song,
I am the mountain herdsman.

When Watch-fires shine from peaks afar,
And the alarm wakes to war,
I own the steep sides I speed along,
Singing free my sword and my song,
I am the mountain herdsman.

THE DANGER OF FLIRTING.

Pollie was pretty, and she knew it. She was nurse-girl at Squire Ridgeway's, but she knew it just as well as if she had been a queen. She knew others thought so, too, and though she was engaged—or "all the same was engaged"—to Leonard Hopper, she could not keep from flirting with anyone who showed the least desire to flirt with her. And Leonard Hopper did not like it, and they quarreled and parted, and made it up again—not once but a hundred times.

The flirting with the young men he knew was bad enough, but there was something worse. Whenever Polly took the baby—Squire Ridgeway's little granddaughter, and the pride of the family—up to the park to walk, she was sure to go into the pretty arbor that overlooked the lake, and there, after a while, to be joined by a young man, such an elegant gentleman, Pollie thought, who paid her such compliments.

Nobody knew about this but the cook. It was cook who told me the story, and over and over again cook declared that she ought to be ashamed of herself, and that Leonard was worth twenty of that fellow. But Edgar Montmorency was so elegant, so charming!

"And it is well to keep two straws to your bow, cook," said Pollie; "Leonard is so cross sometimes."

Thus matters stood when 4th of July came near. Squire Ridgeway and his family were gone out of town, and cook and Pollie kept house.

Generally only one left the house at a time, but the Fourth was a special day. Pollie and cook were both going out, and Pollie was to take the key in her pocket and be home first.

All was settled. She had made up her mind to see the procession in the morning, and she was quite short with Leonard when he came on the evening of the third, and said in a hesitating sort of way,

"Pollie, mother wants you to take tea and spend the evening with her. Will you?"

"I want to see the fireworks," said Pollie.

"Very well, Pollie," said Leonard. "I'd take you, if I could, but something will keep me from going with you to-morrow evening."

"I shan't spend my time indoors to-morrow," said Pollie.

So Leonard went away with a sad face, and Pollie sat crimping the ruffles for her cuffs, and thinking of Edgar Montmorency.

Cook went out early in the morning, so did Pollie, but at five she returned, made herself smart, and went out again. At the corner she met Edgar Montmorency, and he offered his arm and took her first to an ice-cream saloon, then through the streets, past crowds of men and boys, until they came to a great platform.

"I've got seats engaged here," said Edgar; and Pollie, proud of her fine gentleman, who could get seats amongst "quality," mounted the steps and took her place.

"I'll stand behind you," said Edgar; and give me that great heavy key, for it's what no lady should have to bother with; it's too big. Besides, your pocket is not safe in a crowd."

Pollie took the key from her pocket, and her beau leaned over her talking to her, and the display began.

There were stars, wheels, and crosses, eagles and banners; Liberty and all the rest of it; and as Liberty was vanishing in a blue haze, Edgar Montmorency whispered:

"I'm going to get you some candy," made use of his long legs and clambered over the benches and was gone.

Pollie sat still gazing at the show, and uttering "Ohs!" and "Ahs!" of delight, and time passed so quickly that she did not know how long she had been deserted, when suddenly the last gleam of color dropped down from the sky in a train of sparks, and people began to move.

Where was Mr. Montmorency? Pollie looked about her. There was no sign of him.

The crowd was dispersing, the windows were growing dark; but he did not come, and she must wait for him, for he had the key in his pocket.

Pollie waited but her heart sank. She grew frightened and a policeman called to her, asking if she meant to stay up there all night.

"I'm waiting for my company," said Pollie.

"Well, he seems to have forgot about you," said the policeman.

And Pollie descended from the platform bathed in tears, and with a dreadful presentiment of evil in her heart, hurried away homeward; but just as she turned the corner, two honest, fat, motherly figures waddled around it, and came towards her—cook and Leonard's mother.

"You've brought it on yourself," said cook; "but I'm sorry. If you want to see what has happened at home you'd better come."

"Leonard sent us to see you took no harm," said the mother. "Ah, you'd better have took tea with me."

"What is the matter," asked Pollie.

"You'll see soon enough," said cook.

And Pollie, dreading she hardly knew what, hurried along the street between the two old women.

At last they reached Squire Ridgeway's house, and saw, to Pollie's astonishment, that it was brightly lighted, and that a crowd had gathered about the doors.

"Now," said cook, "now, Pollie, you'll see your elegant."

And there in the midst of a group of stalwart policemen, there, indeed, was Edgar Montmorency; and there were two other men; and all three were handcuffed, all three uttering furious imprecations.

Pollie screamed aloud, and suddenly the truth dawned upon her.

Cook put it into plain English.

"You see it was a plan from the first," said she. "He made love to you to get information about the silver and the safe, and he asked you to the fireworks to get the key. I guessed what he was and told Leonard, and it is Leonard that has managed to have him caught at his work; and well for you I knew all or master would have had you arrested for an accomplice. Leonard and me knew you were honest and only just a fool. You ought to be thankful!"

Poor Pollie! she suffered a great deal. It was weeks before she dared to speak to Leonard, though they met in church every Sunday, and she thought herself well and filly punished, and told cook that she should surely be an old maid now; but it was only six months from that day when faithful Leonard came behind her as she was drawing the baby up and down the walk one afternoon, and said:

"Pollie, dear, hasn't this gone on long enough?"

"No, Leonard?" said Pollie. "I never expected you to like me again."

"Ah, but I did," said Leonard. "And since your master thinks I did him a service, and has made me a present of enough to furnish up nicely with, shan't we set our wedding-day this day month?"

All that Pollie said was:

"Oh, Leonard!" and there were tears in her eyes, but he kissed them away.

In a Tight Place.

A young Fond du Lac lawyer learned something the other night. We know it will seem strange that a young lawyer could learn anything, but this one admits it himself. He was out calling on a young lady, when a young man and another young lady called, and the young lawyer thought it would be cunning to get down behind the lounge and not let them know he was there, and surprise them by bolting up suddenly from below when the proper time came.

They came in, the first thing they asked for was the young lawyer, who had told the young man he would be there that evening. Then they began to talk about him, discussed the size of his feet, which they claimed were large, and the size of his head, which they asserted was child's size. He perspired, and they talked about his mashing qualities—how he had mashed a girl who worked in a laundry, and the opinion was expressed that he was a regular flirt. Then they talked about his family, and he tried to stuff his ears.

Just then a little terrier belonging to the girl's brother came into the room, and somebody said "rats" and told the dog to hunt for them, and the dog went under the lounge, and began to growl and shake something, and there was the sound of revelry by night. The other young man and two girls rushed out of the room, and the lawyer got up on his feet, pulling the dog up near his suspenders by the teeth, and the dog shook and the young man kicked and yelled, and presently the girl's father came in, and seeing the dog trying to hold what he supposed was a burglar, he took an old hair-cloth covered chair, and was going to brain the burglar when the young man told who he was, and the father unlocked the dog's teeth, after he remembered the combination, and the young lawyer took himself in his hand and went away. He won't speak to the young people now, and it is said he will sue the owner of the dog for arson or alpacce, or some Latin phrase. The worst thing in the world is to be attacked by conversation or a dog, when you are not looking.

A CLEAN shave—Two per cent. a month.

Other Hunting.

By seven o'clock the hunters were ordered to run the hounds up the stream, and they accordingly made a commencement, Sandy Rose keeping the north side with a dozen of hounds, his brother Eneas, the celebrated piper and composer of Highland music, taking the remainder of the pack up the south side of the river. What is worth noticing is that there were no introductions given. The noble duke was received with a raising of caps by the nobility and gentry present, and every day one was left at liberty to pick up a companion for the day or not, as he chose. At first we had a pleasant stroll along the river-banks and by the side of grass meadows, when we were suddenly aroused from our dreams by what turned out to be a false alarm.

A hute had just got aroused and made a break as the hounds approached her lair, when Falstaff made a spring after, her giving loud tongue, which the other hounds took up. Well knowing what was up the huntsman was soon in pursuit, and made terrific lunges at the dogs with his heavy whip, which consisted of thongs of leather plaited together and attached to a stick. Falstaff's conscience pricked him hard for what he well knew to be a gross breach of decorum, and he kept out of the huntsman's reach as well as he could. He was, however, at last got round, when he had to undergo a severe punishment. The keeper laid it on him just as a villager in the country uses his flail to thrash out his barley or oats, and the poor hute made the wailing in resound with his pitiful cries. That dogs learn wisdom from example can hardly be doubted, and in this case they appear to know very well the offense and the punishment attached to its commission, as they shunk away out of sight while their comrade was suffering his not unmerited chastisement. Our young cockney friend seemed to suffer considerably when the hounds broke off in pursuit of the hare, and as it half hopped away they innocently enough inquired if the animal in question was an otter?

The English country folks tell some very amusing tales of the London swell, when he gets out into the fields for a shoot for the first time. One is worthy of recapitulation. The young gentleman from Pimlico had never seen a hare, and so eager was he to get a shot at one that he would not wait for the gamekeeper's return. He got directions from his hostess to look for a brown haired animal with long ears, which he would find in an adjoining park, and surely he soon found an animal answering the description given him. He returned to the manor house and with great glee related the tale of his first shot, but the entertainer's feelings were by no means agreeable when what was thought to be a hare turned out to be a donkey which was kept purposely for yielding milk to an elderly invalid in the family.

The hounds kept on their course along the stream and as it amusing themselves sniffed at every twig of a tree dipping into the water. They inspected every stone by the river side, and seemed to take most exact reckoning of every mark on the sand or mud beside pools. After we had marched along for an hour or so Jack, who was in front, swam to a stone in the center of the river which just peered above the level of the water. On reaching it and applying his olfactories he made a discovery which created some little attention, and he gave notice of the same by holding his head inclined upward and bellowing in a fearsome manner. The hound discovered by sniffing some droppings which had not been washed away by the stream or rain that an otter had visited that spot within a short period—probably within a couple of days. The lapse of time can be pretty well guessed at by the loudness of the hound's growl, and the frequency of its repetition. As it was the incident put life and mettle into our heels and made us ready to look out for squalls, which we were now pretty sure were coming, although perhaps after a ten mile run.

Trudging along over rocks and stones, having a tumble into pools, the trail became at length more distinct, and at every indication the hounds became more eager for the attack. After passing Brocchan Bridge they broke along in a hard trot and we had to keep pace with them—no easy task on a hot Summer morning. Among the fancy chase like this is called a drag, and we were once engaged on one for ten long weary miles we came close to our prey. By and by we arrived at broken water, and from the movement of the pack—from their continuing to run first up and then down the stream—as well as from their frequent crossing and recrossing it knew that our otter was in the immediate vicinity. Owing, however, to the heavy underwood overhanging the banks, great difficulty was experienced in finding out the exact spot in which he was hiding. Bunkum, a rare and trusty bitch, eventually made the discovery, and on examining the ground the much desired game was found ensconced in a cairn of loose stones, part of which dipped into the river. As the hounds could not near their prey, Flinch a remarkably fine specimen of the Dandie Dinmont breed, was set in "to draw."

The terrier had not been many minutes at his critical job when his loud squealing indicated that he had received quite a warm reception. As however, the aperture between the blocks of stones was so small no assistance could be sent to the aid of little Flinch, and so he had to conquer his hard mouthful opponent or yield, which he would not do as long as a drop of blood remained in his body. The contest between the two, having lasted more than an hour, victory at last declared itself in favor of the Dandie, which by the way was cheaply purchased, as the otter, in self defence, had inflicted a deep wound on his opponent's shoulder, and cut a piece clean off the tip of his tail.

The otter then had no alternative left but to make a bolt right through the entire pack of hounds which were swimming about in front of his den. This he accomplished without much difficulty, as the water was not less than thirty feet deep at this spot. Had the water been shallow, this would have been utterly impossible, but as it was the hunted animal, with that cunning implanted in it by nature for self defence, sprang quite under the furious animals, and only reappeared at the surface a hundred yards or so away. The scots, having observed his nose on the surface of the stream under the lee of a boulder, cried at the top of their voice:

"Tally Ho! Tally Ho!" which well known call was answered by the whole pack swimming for the point indicated. Not waiting for the attack, the otter made for down stream just when the hounds made the big stone. This movement of his the hounds discovered by air bubbles reaching the surface. A pursuit then followed down the river until the ford was reached, when it was conjectured the hounds would be able to grapple with their antagonist. Yet another stroke of policy was, for the moment, successfully resorted to, for just as the pack were rapidly swimming down to the ford their wily enemy, diving low down, swam under them, and once more evaded their zeal and skill. Such marching and counter marching showed real generalship, although it might not guarantee ultimate success.

By the time we were writing our Cockney friends had got quite overcome with hunger and fatigue. "If," they said, "we could only get a mug of Bass' beer or a pot of ale we should try to survive." As it was, there was not a farm house or cottage within five miles, and they were in a sad plight. Soon, however, an Irishman, peddling crockeryware, came past, and they offered him "a soy," equal to $5, if he would carry them if even in a heap—to Ballybrady, which he was very far from being loath to do, as the sight of the yellow tickled his fancy amazingly. And that was the last seen of the Cockney sportsmen.

After spending the whole afternoon in chasing the game, we were, about 5 o'clock in the evening, successful in driving him to a grassy bank into a hole, under which he took refuge. The terriers could not prove of any use, as the drain would not allow them to get behind their foe. Crumpach-More then plied his pick and spade vigorously, so that after three quarters of an hour's hard work the otter's tail was seen. The toil endured by this Highlander who had carried his burden over, on such a day of heat, and then set to work as vigorously as if he had just got out of bed in the morning, was truly astonishing, and certainly no one present could have attempted such labor but himself.

The otter then made another bolt for the river, but this time he was not so successful, as one of the hounds seized him by the hip. Turning round with his head, the otter made the hound speedily relinquish his hold. Others, however, having come up, there was a terrible worry, partly on land and partly in the water, which soon got discolored with the purple tide of the combatants. The otter mashed the jaw of one of the hounds, and in the awful light one of them was drowned. The huntsman could have finished the combat at once by a thrust with his spear, but this it is contended would have been unsportsmanlike. Twenty to one was very heavy odds against the otter, and it is no reflection on his courage to record that he was literally worried to death.

The carcass was then resented from the hounds and carried off on the top of Christie's spear. It was subsequently dispatched to a bird stuffer to be preserved as a trophy of the chase.

It was only after the exciting contest was over that he began to recollect that he had no refreshment since early morning. After a walk of some miles we reached the hasty of Barnabrough, where our conveyance was in waiting, and when we were regaled with strong ale, bread and cheese, qualified with a slight sensation. It was after ten o'clock before we got back to our homes; and after such a fatiguing day's sport it is unnecessary to say that we were soon fixed in the arms of Morpheus.

The farmers of the country, if they would act individually or organize themselves into forestry clubs, could, in a very little while, awaken a widespread interest in tree planting. The advantage of such clubs are highly appreciated in the treeless regions of the West and Northwest. Many of them have been organized, and through their efforts millions of trees have been set out, with an already manifest effect upon the water courses and the humidity of the atmosphere.

The Little Newsboy.

"You see that fat, comfortable-looking woman," I said to a brother journalist who was punishing a cold supper with me lately, "that laundress who just went out, after bringing my clothes home from the week?"

"Your definition is a very good one," replied Dall. "She looks fat, comfortable and, I should judge, she weighed 180 pounds. Is she a widow?"

"Yes,"

"Well, she's a bonnie-looking, healthy kindly-looking woman, but I hope you are not Bohemian enough to have any idea of marrying her," replied my friend Dall.

I laughed long and heartily, and then as the memories of my first meeting with my honest old laundress came into my mind, I became silent and thoughtful. The further my memory went back in connection with good Mrs. Merriam, the more it was hedged with thorns. At last Dall, seeing me musing, said:

"Old boy, your grog is untasted and you're thinking about something painful. I'm sorry if I made a joke that hurt you—let us change the subject. Are you going to see the small yachts race on Saturday?"

"My dear Dall," I answered, "most emphatically shall I refrain from witnessing the illipitian plungers cavort around our bay on Saturday, and I have to remark, in addition, that there is no necessity to change the subject. But, if you will hoist up your interminable crumpled appendages on to the table, and get outside of that grog and blow a cloud, I will tell you the washerwoman's story."

"One act or three?" asked Dall, "because I have to report a meeting of Pecksniff's at 8 p. m., who are going to try the sexton on a charge of heresy—guilty of taking snuff and sneezing during the benediction I believe."

Dall is nothing if not absurd; but he put his legs upon the table and retorted:

"Fire away, old six-foot-of-misery, and make it short," and I did. But Dall is incorrigible, and just as I was beginning: "About four years ago—" he interrupted with—

"Say, drink your toddy. I know this yarn is an infernal lie, but if you swallow about three ounces of alcohol, I have noticed, you always talk so much more pleasantly."

So I emptied my glass and commenced.

About four years ago, when I was on the local staff of the —, I was standing chatting with the hereditary cashier, when a tiny little boy, very much emaciated, came in and bought ten papers at the regular newsboy's rates.

He must have disposed of them very quickly, for he came in again and again: until I calculated that he must have disposed of at least fifty papers.

"That's a smart boy," I remarked to the cashier; "he must have made nearly a dollar and a half in the last hour."

"Yes," replied that official, thoughtfully; "but I sometimes have to trust him for papers. There's something wrong about him. See how thin he is. Guess he's forced to sell papers, and has a father who takes every cent away from him."

"Shouldn't wonder," I answered. "These little street fellows have a tough road to travel." And just as I spoke, I heard the shrill weak, little voice piping outside the counter. "Ten more papers, please."

I left the office, Dall, and went round to a saloon on Clay street to get cocktail before going home; but I couldn't get the idea of that little newsboy out of my head, and, although a party of us were chatting over the election, and a dozen subjects, interesting to newspaper men, that little boy's face stood still in the background of my mind's reflections.

All of a sudden, while we were laughing at one of Little L's jokes, I heard the tiny voice and saw the boy again, with his lips all pinched and looking wither than ever.

This time I was determined to find out something about him.

He was watching his opportunity, and when he saw the barkeeper at leisure he pulled his coat thinly, and I heard him say, "Please, Alfred, give me a glass of water and a cracker."

The kindly hearted barkeeper, Dall, gave him some bread and cheese, some water with raspberry sirup in it, and added: "Pitch in, little 'un. How's your mother?"

"Worse," was the little croak from the bundle of bones, "but I'm bully you bet; and I sold fifty-seven

For the Republican.
SHILOH, LA., Nov. 25, 1881.
DEAR LON—I told you I was going to Louisiana to sell the "Champion Quoting Piano." I was but a few days doing the work. Left Jacksonville the 14th and sold out by the 21st, only seven days from the time I left there. Have bought 1500 acres of land here, but don't like well enough to live here. Times are dull. It is cold weather here—the ground was had frozen this morning. A negro froze to death in the farmersville Saturday night last. The weather will be freezing to day and hot in-morrow. Last Friday I was disagreeably warm without my coat—Saturday it was freezing. It cannot be healthy where such sudden changes take place. Will not bore you with a long letter. Hope to see you soon. Your friend

Taimage on Newspapers.

In a sermon preached last Sunday, Dr. Talmage spoke as follows of the newspaper press:
"What is the news? To answer that cry in the text for the newspaper, the centuries have put their wits to work. China first succeeded, and has at Pekin a newspaper that has been printed every week for 1,000 years, printed on silk. Rome succeeded by publishing the Ficta Diurna, in the same column putting fires, murders, marriages, tempests. France succeeded by a physician writing out the news of the day for his patients. England succeeded under Queen Elizabeth in first publishing the news of the Spanish Armada, and going on until she had enough enterprise, when the battle of Waterloo was fought, deciding the destiny of Europe, to give it one-third of a column in the London Morning Chronicle, about as much as a newspaper of our day gives of a small fire. America succeeded by Benjamin Harris's first weekly paper, called Public Occurrences, published in Boston in 1690, and by the first daily, the American Advertiser, published in Philadelphia in 1784.

* * * To publish a newspaper requires the skill, the precision, the boldness, the vigilance, the strategy of a commander-in-chief. To edit a newspaper requires that one be a statesman and essayist, a geographer, a statistician, and, in acquisition, encyclopedia. To manage, to govern, to propel a newspaper, until it shall be a fixed institution and a national fact, demands more qualities than any business on earth.

* * * Great libraries make a few men and women very wise. Newspapers lift whole nations into the sunlight. Better have fifty million of people moderately intelligent, than a hundred thousand Solons. * * * So far from being ephemeral, nearly all the best minds and hearts have their hands on the printing press today, and have had since it got emancipated. Adams and Hancock and Otis used to go to the Boston Gazette and compose articles on the rights of the people—Benjamin Franklin, DeWitt Clinton, Hamilton, Jefferson, Quincy, were strong in newspaperdom. Many of the immortal things that have been published in book form, first appeared in what you may call the ephemeral periodical. All Macaulay's essays first appeared in a review; all Carlyle's, all Ruskin's, all McIntosh's, all Sidney Smith's, all Hazlett's, all Thackeray's, all the elevated works of fiction in our day, are reprints from periodicals, in which they appeared as serials. Tennyson's poems, Burns's poems, Longfellow's poems, Emerson's poems, Lowell's poems, Whittier's poems, were once fugitive pieces.

* * * If a man should, from childhood to old age, see only its Bible, Webster's dictionary, and his newspaper, he could be prepared for all the duties of this life, or all the happiness of the next.

AGRICULTURAL.

RASPBERRIES ON SANDY SOIL.—When raspberries are to be grown on poor sandy land, the best mode of preparation is to open during autumn, deep furrows with two horses, six to eight feet apart; then to dig and haul enough tide-water mud to fill in the furrows, which will be thoroughly frozen before spring, and at the approach of warm weather will crumble and become mellow, so as to spread evenly; then apply a good coat of ground bone or hair manure along the rows, and set the plants two or three feet apart, requiring about two thousand plants per acre. Bone, hoof, horn, hair or any refuse animal matter is well adapted to promote the growth of raspberries.

Mud is a valuable addition to poor, sandy land; it gives a better color and substance to the soil, absorbs and retains warmth and moisture, for which both raspberry and blackberry roots show a great partiality by following the mud deposit and making a more vigorous growth there than elsewhere.

Such treatment prepares a good foundation for carrying a raspberry crop through a spell of dry weather without suffering from drouth. Potatoes or other vegetables may be grown between the rows, the wildest way, the first summer; after that the raspberries will require the whole space.

The cultivation is very simple. Stir the ground frequently with horse and cultivator to keep down grass and weeds, being careful the latter part of summer not to disturb by deep culture the small roots feeding next the surface.

PREVENTION OF HOGE CHOLERA.—A correspondent writes on this subject as follows: Prevention is better than cure for hog cholera in about the ratio of fifty to one, and to this end there should be a sheltered place of rest with plenty of dry absorbent earth to lie on, abundance of good air, sheds sweetened by whitewashing once in three months, clean water to drink and salt, sulphur and sublimates soft coal or charcoal always accessible. An entire change of food from corn to potatoes, mangolds and carrots cooked and raw, as often as once a week. The exclusive use of corn failing to cure certain digestive activities may result in a weakness favorable to the progress of cholera. Separation also into small herds is well. There also of strong constitution should be carefully selected, untainted by cholera, or the progeny may be tainted by a cholera diathesis so that the disease will develop on slight causes.

SPRINGING FOR CHICKENS.—It seems hardly necessary to say how desirable sun shine is for fowls. But it may be mentioned for all, because it is not often thought about. Health cannot long be enjoyed by an animal that is deprived of the sun. There will be a paleness or yellowness, a languor and weakness and a susceptibility to positive disease. The blood will become dark and impure, no matter how good the food may be and how well all the other wants are supplied. Long intervals of cloudy weather will occur in some seasons. At such times the health of young broods will not be so good. A dark room, barn or cellar is not the place for chickens, nor for any living animals. It is necessary that they should have sunlight as it was for vegetation. The long, weak shoots of plants without light is an example of the evil effects of the want of light.

CHLORIDE OF LIME.—A French journal states that chloride of lime scattered about where rats and mice frequent will cause them to desert. A solution of it brushed over plants will effectually protect them from insects. If scattered over ground infested with grubs, it will free it entirely. Bunches of cotton on tow smeared with a mixture of chloride of lime and hog's lard, and tied about in different parts of a tree, will guard it against the attack of insects, slugs, grubs, etc., and drive away those insects in possession.

FAT MAKES HENS LAY.—There is much refuse fat from the kitchen that can be turned to a good account by feeding it to the hens. Of course when soap is made it will be used up in that way, but it is a question whether it is not much easier and more profitable to buy soap and make hens lay by feeding them with fat. Everything that is not wanted for drippings for cooking purposes should be boiled up with the vegetables for the fowls.

So soon as the heavy frosts are expected, the mangels and sugar beets must be secured. The tops should be rubbed, cut off, as they keep longer. Secure the carrots next after the beets, and follow with the turnips, leaving the Swedes until the last. In pitting roots they should be put in when dry. The pit may extend to any desired length; a ventilator should be put in at intervals of six feet.

If eggs are expected during the winter they must be provided for by disposing of old hens and selecting the best young pullets and feeding them well. They should have clean quarters and plenty of pure water, lime in the form of shells or bones, gravel, etc. Do not crowd the fowls, and if well fed and kept warm, an abundance of eggs may be expected from them.

There is probably not much corn now standing in the districts where early frosts prevail, and the October dews are largely spent husking this important crop. If there is a market for husks the corn may be picked from the stalks and husked in the barn, otherwise it is more rapid and economical to husk in the field.

Free ventilation is essential to the thorough curing of the corn, therefore the sides of the crib should be covered, so far as curing corn is concerned, there is nothing better than the old red pen, narrower at the base than at the top, with stalks or boards for a cover; but it is not secure from vermin.

The product of the dairy should be increased in every possible way. This requires the best feed and plenty of water, and frequent milking of the animals to keep them neat and clean. Young stock should not suffer from the cold and wet.

In experiments with sugar-beets a German agriculturist has concluded that the application of phosphoric acid in the spring materially increases the yield of sugar.

Manure from grain-fed horses free from straw, unexposed to weather, will weigh about 4,500 pounds per cord.

In domestic animals, such as the horse and cow, the oil is of a somewhat lighter color in winter than in summer.

The quercus of Patagonia is described as having the head of a camel, the body of a deer, wool of a sheep and neigh of a horse.

Do not allow the soil about young fruit trees to become hard and crusty, but keep it clean and constantly mellow.

It is advantageous to turn sheep into orchards in summer and allow them to stay there until the apples begin to ripen.

DOMESTIC.

ENGLISH COOKING RECIPES.—Common Onion Sauce.—Four or six white onions, according to size, half a pint of milk; one ounce of butter; salt and pepper to taste. Peel the onions and boil them until very tender; press the water from them and chop fine. Make the milk hot and pulp the onions into it, and add the seasoning. Serve hot. Nottingham pudding.—Six large apples, two ounces of sugar, one pint of batter for puddings. Peel and core the apples, fill up the holes with sugar, and place in a pudding dish. Cover them with light batter. Bake one hour.

UNFLAMMABLE FABRICS.—Many substances are known which will render even the thinnest wearing fabrics unflamable. Chloride, sulphate and phosphate of ammonia, alum, and many other salts have been proposed, but neutral turgate of sodium mixed with three per cent of phosphate of sodium is better than anything else. These salts afford perfect protection to the fabrics, and unlike most others, do not render them harsh. They are inexpensive, without action on colors, and the solution keeps well. The solution should contain twenty per cent. of mixed salts.

(Washington Critic.)
Saved by Oil.
Mrs. Susanna Asmus, No. 11 Bartlett street, Baltimore, Md., had for twenty-two years been a sufferer from sores and pains in her limbs. She tried many remedies without any favorable result. Happening to hear of St. Jacob's Oil, she concluded at last to try it. The result was wonderful. The sores healed, the pains vanished, and she is now well again.

EMERY.—A manufacturer whose business requires the use of large amounts of emery has been trying an experiment with the ashes of anthracite coal, and he affirms that he has obtained good results from the use of ashes as a substitute for the heavy grades of emery. He takes ashes and saturates them with water, the liquid being poured off again, and so on until he obtains several grades, down to a substitute for every flour. When dried the deposit cuts readily and leaves a satisfactory surface.

STEEL PAINT.—An English firm have begun the manufacture of a paint from steel scale, for the protection of iron and steel from corrosion. The scale is first ground until entirely free from grit, when it is mixed with oil and coloring matter. Two kinds of paint are made, one to be used as an anti-corrosive in the air, and the other to be used under water to prevent animal and vegetable matter from attaching to the ships' bottoms or other submarine works.

ESCAPE OF GAS.—Apply soap-suds to a suspected leaky joint in the gas-pipe. The formation of bubbles will show any escape. This is safer than trying the joint with a lit match. If the leak occur in a branch of a bracket or chandelier, it may be repaired by soldering with plumber's fine solder; if it be a very small one, heat the place first with a spirit-lamp, and fill the aperture with cement.

(Jackson Mich.) Daily Patriot.)
We learn from Messrs. Moore & Humphrey, that St. Jacob's Oil is regarded as the very best selling liniment ever sold, and is giving the highest satisfaction. It has effected many good cures.

SOFTEN SAGE.—Two pieces of blue satin three inches square, sew into a tiny bag, and put in three layers of cotton filled with sachet powder. Sew the open end together, and quilt white silk lace around the edge. Paste an embossed floral motif on one or both sides, and you have a pretty addition for a writing desk, glove or handkerchief case.

A CHINA CUP AND SAUCER on a bracket slow to better advantage by placing the saucer on a gilt or silver wire easel, and setting the cup beside it. Little satin fans painted with flowers or landscapes may be used for winter decorations by cutting off part of the long handle and putting it on an easel.

PLUM MARMALADE.—Rub the plums after draining, through a sieve or colander to take out the skins and stones. Add half a pound of sugar for each half pint of pulp, boil slowly, stirring well to prevent burning, until it is a smooth, thick paste. Excellent marmalade is made by mixing the sifted pulp of wild plums and crab-apples.

LIOS CEMENT.—The following is an iron cement which is unaffected by red heat: Four parts by weight iron filings, two parts clay, one part fragment of a Hessian crucible; reduce to the size of rape-seed and mix together, working the whole into a stiff paste with a saturated solution of salt. A piece of firebrick can be used instead of the Hessian crucible.

The successful man has many imitators in his peculiar line of business, but still there is only one originator. So also, the great petroleum hair restorer, Carboline, is now improved and perfected, holds the palm against all imitators as a genuine article of merit. Try.

PUM JELLY.—Scald the plums in water, with saleratus added, as directed for preserving. Rinse in cold water. Then put over the fire again with enough water to cover, and boil till soft. Strain (without squeezing) and to one pint of juice add one pound sugar and boil twenty minutes.

PIES FOR PIES.—A nice way to keep plums to use for pies in the winter is to seal them, but not enough to make them crack open, then put them into a jar, pour the hot water over them, and cover them with a plate. They will keep this way all winter.

DAMP WALLS.—Boil in a gallon of water three-quarters of a pound of mottled soap, and while boiling apply it with a brush. After a day and a night apply a solution of a quarter of a pound of alum in two gallons of water in the same way. It may take a day to dissolve the alum.

CRAB-APPLE MARMALADE.—Take the apples left after straining off the juice for jelly, and put them through a sieve. To three pounds of sifted pulp add two pounds of sugar, and boil twenty minutes, stirring constantly to keep it from burning. Flavor with cinnamon or lemon extract.

CRAB-APPLE JELLY.—Put the apple into water enough to cover them, and boil until they crack open. Strain off the juice and add granulated sugar in the proportion of a pint of sugar to a pint of juice. Boil twenty minutes.

It is best to use earth paints without lead for roofs, for in case of water being used from the roof there would be no danger for the inmates of the house, whereas with lead or zinc the consequences might be of a very serious nature.

When fattening an animal for beef let the process be as quick as possible. Any stint in feeding will make the meat tough and dry.

Vegetine

Dr. Callier Surprised.

Vegetine Cured His Daughter.

CALLIERVILLE, CHILTON CO., Ala., May 16, 1878.
Dear Sir:—My daughter has been afflicted with neuralgia, affection of bladder and kidneys, and is of scrofulous diathesis, and after having exhausted my skill and the most eminent physicians of South Alabama, I have been forced to the use of Vegetine (without confidence) and, to my great surprise, my daughter has been restored to health. I write this as a simple act of justice, and not as an advertising medium.

Worked like a Charm—Cured Salt Rheum & Erysipelas.

TO COURT ST., HOME, N. Y., July 10, 1878.
MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir:—One year ago last fall my little boy had a breaking out of Erysipelas and Salt Rheum, his skin being one mass of sores of the worst description. Nothing you advertised in the papers, and seeing one bottle of Vegetine, I bought one. I used it as directed, and in a few days the sores were cured. I never saw anything like the Vegetine; it worked like a charm. I have been city watchman at home for years. This testimonial is gratifying. Yours, respectfully,
ROBERTO GIDLEY.

Remarkable Cure of Scrofulous Face.

WESTMINSTER, CONN., June 19, 1878.
MR. H. R. STEVENS:
Dear Sir:—I can testify to the good effect of your Vegetine. My little boy had a SCROFULOUS face break out on his head as large as a quarter of a dollar, and it went down his face from one ear to the other, under his neck, and was one solid mass of sores. Two bottles of your valuable Vegetine completely cured him.
MRS. G. M. THATCHER.

A GENTLEMAN calling on a farmer, observed, "Mr. Jones, your clock is not quite right, is it?" "Well, you see, sir," said Mr. Jones, "nobody does understand much about that clock but me. When the hands of that clock stand at 12, then it strikes two, and then I know it is twelve minutes to seven."

VEGETINE.—The great success of VEGETINE as a cleanser and purifier of the blood is shown beyond a doubt by the great numbers who have taken it, and received immediate relief, with such remarkable cures.

A LITTLE too fresh: Jones was sitting on the front steps the other night, waiting for his sweetheart to come out. She knew what time to come and Jones didn't wish to ring the bell for fear of alarming the old folks. Presently he heard the door open and the old man muttered something about somebody's being "too fresh." "Do you address yourself to me?" said Jones springing up with a flashing eye. "No," said the old man, mildly; "I was speaking of the point on the steps." It was not until this afternoon, Jones clapped his hands to the spot, and realizing the force of the old man's remarks, reached his room in five minutes.

Guard against Disease.
If you find yourself getting bilious, head heavy, mouth foul, eyes yellow, kidneys disordered, symptoms of piles tormenting you, take at once a few doses of kidney-wort. It is nature's great assistant. Use it as an advance guard—don't wait to get down sick. See large advertisement.

"Can the electric light be made use of for submarine exploration?" asked a reporter of Edison. "Oh, yes. I have an electric lamp made for submarine work on exhibition at Paris. The water can be lighted up as well as the air. I could lay a cable from here to Sandy Hook, with lamps about fifty feet apart, and light up the whole channel." "Would it be lighted up so that a pilot could see all the rocks and shoals?" "Yes, he could pick his way along just as you can on the street."

Truth and Honor.
Query.—What is the best family medicine in the world to regulate the bowels, purify the blood, remove costiveness and biliousness, digestion and tone up the whole system? Truth and honor compels us to answer, Hop Bitters, being pure, perfect and harmless.—Ed.

A very bald gentleman was exhibiting to his friend his well appointed toilet table, when he brushed of every size and shape. "Yes, I see, I see," said his friend; "you have everything—that is, everything except—"

"Except what?"

"Hair."

Comforting. "Mr. Boatman," said a timid woman to the ferryman who was rowing her across a river, "have people ever lost in this river?" "Oh, no, ma'am," he replied, "we always find 'em again within a day or so."

and increasing.

Now, you will find that liberal people are happy people, and get more enjoyment of what they have than folks of churlish mind. Misers never rest until they are put to bed with a shovel. They often get so wretched that they would hang themselves, only they grudge the expense of a rope. Generous souls are made happy by the happiness of others. The money they give to the poor buy them more pleasure than any other that they lay out.
I have seen men of means give coppers, and they have been copper in every thing. They carried on a tin-pot business, lived like beggars, and died like gods. I have seen others give to the poor and to the cause of God by showing and they have had it back by barrow loads. They made good use of their stewardship, and the great Lord has trusted them with more, while the bells in their hearts have rung out merry peals
when they have thought of widows who blessed them, and orphan children who smiled into their faces.—John Ploughman's Pictures.

ABOUT WEEDS.—Our best farmers are beginning to learn, and in fact many of them have already learned, that the time spent in destroying weeds in the autumn is well spent, and that if they would save time in cultivating hood crops they must keep the weeds from seedling as much as possible in all parts of the farm; a little carelessness in this respect will soon cover a farm with weed seeds. A single row of milkweed in a field, if left unwatched, will spread over and take possession of a large field in a few years.—Lawson Journal.

Sheriff Blucker of Bourbon county, Kansas, reports that he has captured the notorious Dick Little, one of the James gang of train robbers, at the residence of his father, thirty miles from Fort Scott. The State had offered
$10,000, and the railroad companies $5,000 for the capture of Little, who was in both the Glendale and Blue Cut train robberies, and it is supposed was the leader at Winston when three persons were killed.

Special-Agent Tingle of the Treasury Department, reports that it cost over 6,000,000 to collect 200,000,000 in customs revenue last year; that twenty two per cent of duty did not collect a dollar in duties, and that thirty-two per cent did not collect enough to pay expenses. An increase in the sugar duty has resulted in a loss of revenue amounting to nearly 2,000,000.

THE HOG EDUCATION.

Chattanooga Times.]
The readers of the Times will recollect the account published some time since of the mysterious power of an aged hermit on Walden's Ridge, called "Uncle Boston," over hogs, and his remarkable success in training them.
About a year ago he trained a hog
to a remarkable state of perfection, but being out of funds he was compelled to kill it, but before the fatal blow was struck directed it to kneel, which it did, then ordered it to say its prayers, which it did by uttering a series of grunts,
then at his bidding, laid its head on a block and met its death. He has several trained to watch his gate, carry food anywhere he directs them without tasting it, refuse food in their pen when ordered, and perform a number of other extraordinary feats. His educated hogs attract much attention in that vicinity.

A united Jewish colony is out to be formed in the district of Guilford and Moab, the Sultan of Turkey, having granted 1,500,000 acres of land for the purpose, in consideration of a large amount of money to be advanced by Jewish capitalists. The new colony is to be subject to a prince of Jewish race and religion, though tributary to the Porte.
It has been also affirmed that within the last few years a wealthy Jew has lent
"Six millions of pounds" to the Turkish Government, on the security of the land of Palestine, so that if it be true that the Porte is insolvent, there is reason to conclude that the whole of "The Promised Land, may, ere long, again be recognised as the rightful property of the Jews.

Calhoun County.
A. N. McBride, vs. A. N. McBride have vs. R. R. Ledbetter, undersigned, Justice of the Peace for said county, for and obtained an attachment against the estate of R. R. Ledbetter, and said Ledbetter being a non-resident of the State of Alabama, and his particular place of residence supposed to be Beasley post office in the State of Florida. Said R.
Ledbetter is hereby notified of the pendency of said attachment, and that the same has been levied by summoning J. H. Ray to answer, as guaranties, and that if said R. R. Ledbetter does appear before me my office in Cross Plains (Box No. 9) in said county, on the 21st day of January, 1882, I will proceed to give judgment on said attachment as if said defendant were present, and will award such process as the case
may require.

Rheumatism Neuralgia

Sprains, Pain in the Back and Side.
There is nothing more painful than these diseases, but the pain can be removed and the disease cured by the use of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER. It not only affords a permanent cure, but it relieves pain almost instantaneously. Being a purely vegetable remedy, it is safe in the hands of the most inexperienced.
The record of cures by the use of PAIN KILLER would fill volumes. The following extracts from letters received show what those who have tried it think:
Edgar Cady, Owatonna, Minn., says:
"About a year since my wife became subject to severe suffering from rheumatism. Our resort was to the PAIN KILLER, which speedily relieved her."
Charles Powell writes from the Sailors'
Home, London:
"I had been afflicted three years with rheumatism and violent spasms of the stomach. The doctors were unsuccessful. I tried PAIN KILLER, and in a few days I was free from all my troubles,
and am now able to do my usual work."
Mr. Burdett writes:
"I have used PAIN KILLER for thirty years,
and have found it a never-failing remedy for rheumatism and lumbago."
Phil Gilbert, Somerset, Pa., writes:
"I have used PAIN KILLER for many years, and it is the best medicine I can get."
All druggists keep PAIN KILLER. Its price is so low that it is within the reach of all, and it will save many times its cost in doctor's bills.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA.

In Probate Court for said county, Special Term, November 14th, 1881.
This cause came on for hearing, and the undersigned, J. D. King, deceased, and filed his account and vouchers for a final settlement of said estate.
It is ordered by the court that the 31st day of Dec., 1881, be and the same is hereby appointed the day upon which to audit and pass upon said account and to make said settlement, and that notice thereof be given for three successive weeks in the Jacksonville Republican, a newspaper printed and published in said county, as a notice to all persons interested, to be and appear before me at my office in the Court House of said county, on said 31st day of Dec., 1881, and contest said settlement if they think proper.

the said garnishees above named, did before final judgment against them, on the 11th day of August, 1881, by leave of the court, file an amendment, in which they charged that they have each been notified that you claim title to,
or an interest in, the debt which they owe to the said plaintiffs, and that you are indebted to the said defendants, Moore, Jenkins & Co.; and whereas, it appearing to be true that you are a non-resident of the State of Alabama, proceedings in the context with yourself
on the part of said plaintiffs, G. J. Cooper & Son, were ordered by the court to be stayed for six months. You are therefore hereby notified of said action on the part of each of said garnis-hees as above set forth, and that said
action is now pending in said Circuit Court of Calhoun County, Alabama, and that you appear at the next term of said court, which commences on the seventh Monday after the first Monday in December, 1881, and contest, if you see proper to do so, with said plaintiffs, G.
J. Cooper & Son, the right to the several sums of money admitted by said garnishees, in their several answers, to be due said defendants, Moore, Jenkins & Co. Given under my hand at office in
